

Dear Rutgers Law Community,

The Rutgers Race & The Law Review stands in solidarity with the Association of Black Law Students. We support the Black Lives Matter movement, and support the fight for justice and equality.

We mourn the lives of George Floyd, Breonna Taylor, Ahmaud Arbery, David McAtee, and the countless lives taken by police brutality. There is an immediate need to dismantle the systemic racism and white supremacy that has continued to oppress Black communities throughout America. We must continue to educate ourselves, participate in the fight for equality and justice, and pledge to advocate for necessary reforms.

Our journal's mission is to raise awareness of the intersection between race and the law. We believe it is our mission as law students to fight against inequality as a whole. We must continue to challenge the system that allows these injustices to reign, and we must challenge each other to keep fighting in the face of adversity.

In solidarity,

The Race & The Law Review
