

Rutgers Law School Women's Law Caucus – Camden

Statement of Solidarity

The Women's Law Caucus stands in solidarity with the Black community and the Rutgers Camden Black Law Students Association against continued institutionalized racism and racial violence that has plagued this nation for far too long. Our fight for women's rights embodies all rights associated with our Black sisters. The time is now to transform our legal systems and institutions from places of oppression to places of justice and change.

The Women's Law Caucus calls upon all its members, allies, the Rutgers Law community and beyond to take immediate action in ending injustice against our Black community. Take time to educate yourself, speak up, call people out, have conversations, be anti-racist, protest, raise awareness, take advantage of your right to vote, and so much more. No matter how you decide to take action, keep us all moving in the same direction.

We are the next generation of activists who must take the frustrations from our failed systems and put it toward real and concrete change.

From those of us who will never understand, we stand with you. We honor the innocent lives lost: George Floyd, Ahmaud Arbery, Breonna Taylor, Tony McDade and so many more. Stay safe everyone.

In Solidarity,

2020-2021 WLC Executive Board
