Chancellor's Awards for Diversity, Inclusion, and Civic Engagement

These awards celebrate those who strive daily to foster understanding and learning, invest in building relationships across differences, and offer new ways to promote equity and diversity. These honorees were celebrated during a special event in the Multi-Purpose Room in the Campus Center.

For Student Civic Engagement:

2023-2024:

Rachel Tavani

2022-2023:

Zaniya Lewis

Dean's Award for Service to Rutgers Law School recognizes particularly significant contributions to the law school and the surrounding community.

Andrew Ibarra
Hannah Soisson
Rachel Tavani
Nayomi Torres-Velez

David Dolgenos Memorial Award honors a successful New York real estate, entertainment, and commercial lawyer. He was from a working-class family and put himself through law school by working as a dance instructor, construction worker and waiter, and holding other jobs. This award is for a student who has overcome similar difficult obstacles in the path to a J.D., such as being a non-native English speaker, the first in a family to attend college, a single parent, disabled, or facing other life obstacles. The award, which is funded by the family of Professor Sarah Ricks, is designed to help the student lighten financial burdens while studying for the bar exam.

Trang Do

Herb and Tricia Hinkle Award for Commitment to Educating Camden Youth About Law recognizes a student or students who demonstrated outstanding commitment to educating young people in Camden about the law through one or more of the law school's projects (including but not limited to the Street Law Pro Bono Project, the Marshall-Brennan Constitutional Literacy Project or the Summer Law Institute).

Rachel Tavani and Brian Read

National Association of Women Lawyers Award is presented to the student who, through academic achievement, motivation, tenacity and drive, shows promise to contribute to the advancement of women in the legal community and in society.

Daniella Mannino

Philadelphia Bar Association Eve Biskind Klothen Law Student Pro Bono Distinction Award, in recognition of Eve Biskind Klothen's tremendous support and guidance to generations of public interest attorneys, students, and organizations during her career, honors students from the area law schools for their outstanding pro bono and public interest work during law school.

Thomas Boisvert
Chakeema Cruikshank
Rachel Tavani

Philadelphia Bar Association Public Interest Section Law Student Award

honors area law students for the area law schools who exemplify the pro bono ethic and who have worked tirelessly in support of social justice at their law schools and in their communities.

Meghan DeVol

Mary Philbrook Student Public Interest Award, presented since 1999, recognizes students for exceptional contributions to the public interest during their years in law school. The qualities recognized by the Student Public Interest Awards are: outstanding public service contributions in community organizations, particularly contributions related to law, justice and the legal system; activism in the Rutgers community; a continuous dedication to public interest that goes above and beyond that of most law students; and a G.P.A. of 2.5 or above.

Thomas Boisvert

Marshall-Brennan Constitutional Literacy Project,

enlists law students in an effort to increase civic literacy and participation in American democracy. The project prepares gifted upper-level law student "Fellows" to teach a course in Constitutional and civic literacy in local high schools. The aim is to make the Constitution "come alive" for young people in Camden while reinforcing law students' mastery of the substantive material and lawyering skills. The Marshall-Brennan Constitutional Literacy Project is supported by funding from a foundation named for Michael Young, an outstanding Rutgers-Camden Law student who died shortly before his graduation in 2004.

Pro Bono Publico Awards

All aspects of the Pro Bono Program are designed with three goals: (1) to address unmet legal needs in the community; (2) to help law students develop substantive legal knowledge, while honing professional contacts and skills; and (3) to help law students cultivate a lifelong commitment to pro bono service. Students receiving a Pro Bono Award have made a significant volunteer commitment to one or more of the Law School's pro bono projects or have served through local, regional, or national public interest legal organizations. Pro Bono Publico awardees have volunteered at least 50 hours (35 for part-time students); Dean's Pro Bono Publico Award for Exceptional Service awardees have volunteered at least 100 hours (70 hours part-time); Dean's Pro Bono Publico Award for Exceptional Service, with Distinction awardees have volunteered at least 200 hours (140 part-time).

Social Justice Scholars

The Social Justice Scholars (SJS) Program is an elite scholarship program for students with a commitment to public service and social justice. Rutgers Law School is committed to promoting public interest law through a variety of programs and opportunities for our students. Each year, Rutgers Law recognizes a small cohort of incoming students at the Camden location as Social Justice Scholars; they remain in the program throughout law school and beyond. These students demonstrate an exceptional commitment to public service and are most likely to dedicate their legal careers to working on social justice causes and on behalf of underserved communities.

Rayman L. Solomon Scholars

The Rayman L. Solomon Scholars program at the Camden location of Rutgers Law School in honor of former dean and current faculty member, Ray Solomon. The new program is designed to attract students to Rutgers Law who have distinguished themselves academically and indicated an interest in public service.
